

Food & Drink

The latest Michelin guide features more restaurants in the Region than anywhere else outside London. It's a reflection of the quality that's now common in so many aspects of the Region's entertainment and nightlife. Wherever you go, you'll find our contemporary cities and towns full of energy, choice and culture.

Fine dining or atmospheric bistros thrive in every corner. From organic cafes to packed gastro pubs, good food has never been more accessible.

To complement a host of excellent restaurants, we have some of the finest drinks in the world – thanks largely to the brewing capital of Britain in Burton-upon-Trent or the delights of Herefordshire cider.

- * Dine in Ludlow where you can choose from the widest selection of Michelin-starred restaurants in Britain outside London
- * Well known for its cultural diversity, the Region has a range of exotic cuisines on offer. For example, the "Indian" Balti was first cooked here with the finest exponents of the art still thriving throughout the south of Birmingham
- * The Mailbox is fast becoming a worthy setting with restaurants like Paris developing their reputations. But scattered right from Leamington Spa to Hagley, there are numerous highly exclusive and reputable establishments serving up the most inviting menus
- * For the best of local produce, there are many farmers' markets now established right across the Region
